

THE STEM AMBASSADOR PROGRAMME IN YOUTH AND COMMUNITY GROUPS

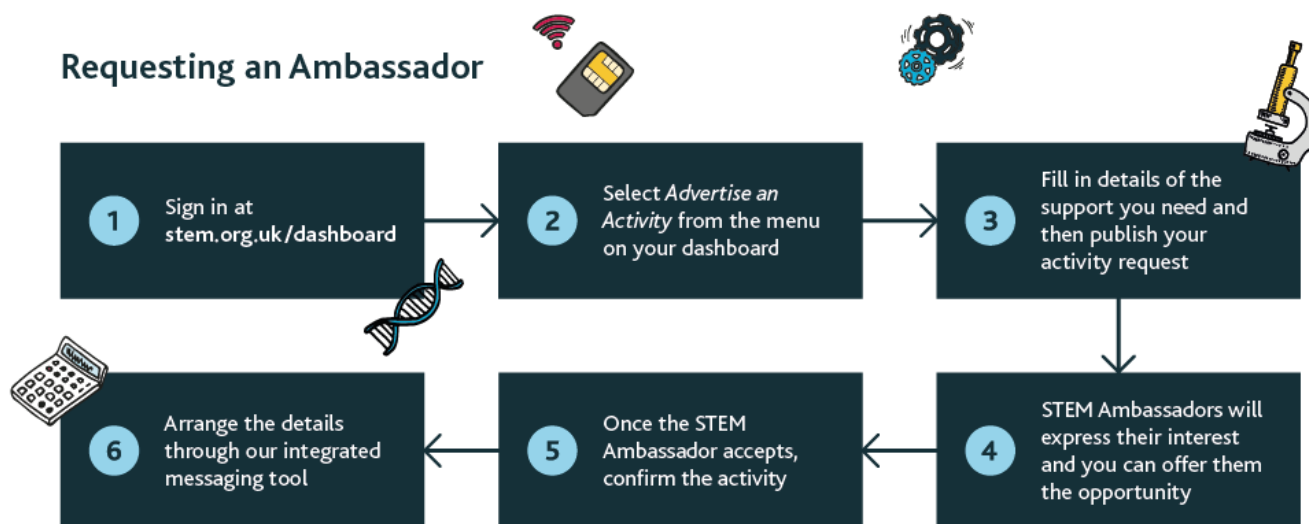

Did you know there are thousands of volunteers in Scotland available to support young people with a range of STEM activities in community settings?

STEM Ambassadors are people working or studying in a STEM field, that are PVG-checked by STEM Learning, who give up their time to help demonstrate the value of STEM subjects and careers.

STEM Ambassadors can join STEM events and activities with young people in-person or virtually. They can also support youth/community group leaders with activity ideas, creating resources, or increasing their confidence and understanding of a topic they will be delivering to young people.

Finding a STEM Ambassador

Whatever kind of support you're looking for, making use of STEM Ambassadors happens through the STEM Learning website. You can advertise your own activity/support ideas for STEM Ambassadors to express their interest in, or browse the Offers of activities they are advertising to you. Find out more about Offers in the attached guidance.

For more information about how our volunteers can support you please check out the attached handbook, head to the STEM Learning website, or get in touch with Ewa Monteith-Hodge at ewa.monteith-hodge@sserc.scot
